Last Monday an agent for a new fire escape came to the Fiume House, and tried it. It is a simple but ingenious invention being simply a piece of stout canvas about two yards in width and two yards in length, and is rolled about two feet wide. The slack of the canvas is allowed to fall on the under side, and a person lying in this slack can slide rapidly and easily to the ground.
Two men stand at the foot and hold the escape a little out of the perpendicular, until so that when you get within two or three feet of the ground you stop it is a good thing and all public places should have one.

The Beadle-Prindle Pleasure Party
